Introducing How-To Geek School: Learn Technology for Free

www.howtogeek.com/132654/introducing-how-to-geek-school-learn..

Most of you may be somewhat familiar with Windows 7. But just how knowledgeable are you? Could you pass a Microsoft certification test? Or do you even want to? What if you just want to learn, without spending any money? The geek school series tries to teach computer technology in a more in-depth fashion starting with Windows 7 and going beyond. Through a series of lessons with lots of pictures and advice, even you can learn to become a “techie.”

If you just want to learn without spending any money, you can check out the articles in the series so far and periodically look forward to more. The website advises, “... read the entire series on the website for free, forever.” At the end of the course, there will be a practice test that you can take to see just how well you know the material. Be advised that the material may be more than you wanted to know or tackle, then again it might be your cup of tea.

Computers don't come with operating system installation CDs anymore. If your operating system won't boot, you'll need a bootable recovery drive to fix it.

This should be made before your computer will not boot!

How to Create a System Image with Windows 8.1

By Gizmo Freeware

A previous tip showed how to create a system image in Windows 8. In Windows 8.1, Microsoft changed the procedure and made it harder to find. In this tip, I will give the new way to make a system image.

As the previous tip described, an obscure feature called "Windows 7 File Recovery" for creating system images was tucked away in Windows 8. That applet is gone from Windows 8.1 but the same functionality is still there with a different name. It is found in the feature called "File History" that was described in this other tip. The function has the new name "System Image Backup" and here are the steps to access it.
